The situation surrounding higher education worldwide has changed dramatically over the past quarter century. Alongside the popularisation, commercialisation and internationalisation of higher education and the impact of global economic liberal trends, a marked political division has recently been exposed. It is an urgent task for universities to clarify the profile of the human resources they should develop and to establish methods to do so, with a view to the future of these societal changes. The purpose of this symposium is to provide an opportunity to explore the future of higher education and its research in a rapidly changing society.
